PARNIKI

Indoor gardening, as a metaphor for self growing, roots and mycelium extended as our neural connections. We have become habitats of an uncertain encapsulated environments, our companion species flourish and die next to us, during isolation we fertilize new relationships, we dialogue with the previous overlooked entities, recognizing their autonomy, We shifted our creative processes and looked for indoor freedom. During 9th of september artists will show their projects in Parniki pathway.

ABANDONED GARDENS

Abandoned garden needs a prefix post or alter.

A garden not cultivated is always an alien minding oneself, or rather oneself feels an alien in it.

Closed garden, abandoned of the virus, or unreachable as paradise, or sacred garden of Hesperids, where the golden apples of youth are. The garden is at a distance as the past, the beautiful green plants of one's memories, the only space where one feels happy in retrospective.

WANDERING GARDENS

We usually see the river as a surface, but it has a depth within which underwater gardens grow. Those gardens are almost invisible, they don't have still shapes, they are fluid. And it's important to rethink the idea of the garden in this context. We need to invent new access modes to the city's aquatic ecosystem and re-attune to each other with help of artists and scientists.

PANGARDENIA FINISSAGE

Pangardenia is an epidemic that has taken over the gardens and gardens that have taken over us. It vests everyone with the desire to grow or be grown by somebody else. We, St.-Petersburg artists, want to explore this phenomenon, find the new life forms generated by this epidemic and study the old ones which were preserved and hidden in the gardens.
